Peer Support Training

2-Day Peer Support Training

- A comprehensive and engaging two-day training program designed to instruct First Responders in the art of effective communication with fellow colleagues facing difficulties. The training covers intervention strategies aimed at recognizing signs of crisis among First Responders. Beyond theoretical learning, a portion of the training day will be dedicated to hands-on application through real-case scenarios, allowing participants to put their knowledge into action.
- The primary aim of peer support is to assist First Responders grappling with mental health difficulties in attaining a sense of hope and a path towards recovery. For individuals facing challenges, the valuable perspectives shared by a member of the peer support team can offer profound support, potentially impacting both their professional journey and overall well-being.
